

To Anyone Looking for a Great Caterer:

When we decided to get married, we wanted something different. Eventually this desire found us enjoying a wedding at the shore, with a beachfront reception in two homes that we rented, side by side. With friends and family coming from all over the country, we thought all we needed to seal the deal was some food...

Boy, were we wrong!!! Thankfully, the Gods of Outdoor Weddings and Barbeque intervened, bringing us Anthony and "Hot Rods". With all of his wedding and catering experience, Anthony helped us realize the many small necessities we completely overlooked. He advised us and we could tell that he was much more than business; he truly cared how our special day went. Anthony dealt with our many visits, tastings, questions and menu changes without ever batting an eye.

The morning of the big day Hot Rods arrived and set up, as if they could do it with their eyes closed. The bride, being dressed and decorated for hours, watched them through her window; knowing that this was the one detail she would not have to worry about today. Hot Rods had her full confidence. One of her great memories of the day is spending the last half hour of single life talking to the caterers, before her father whisked her away.

Returning for the reception later, guests started surrounding us, all telling us how great the food was. We have friends who are chefs, always ready to comment on how a meal could be better... but rather than commentary, we overheard compliments being paid directly to Anthony and his staff; verbal pats on the back and questions of how they do what they do, so well. By the end of the night, everyone was asking to not only hear the story of us, but to hear the story of us and "Hot Rods"; looking for phone numbers and contact info.

Since our experience with Anthony, we have had opportunity to try BBQ at a few other BBQ restaurants... I guess our experience has left us spoiled because none of these places seem to match up and we still keep finding ourselves cruising up to Wharton, for real barbeque cooking.

Anthony, we thank you... for all of your contribution and effort before the event ever arrived. And for making our wedding the one that aspiring couples want to top, for this summer and many summers to come!
